“Drum roll, please, for Resonators”

“If the Resonators takes its act on the road, the community would be well represented. And if the group chooses to perform only locally, its classy professionalism deserves sold-out status.”

- Midland Daily News
February 2003

The Midland Daily News loves the Resonators and so do the thousands of lucky people who’ve heard them perform so far. This innovative and invigorating ensemble will thrill you, too!

Who They Are:

The Resonators Percussion Ensemble consists of five school groups (4th through 12th grade), and adult group, and a professional group.

Each group consists of approximately 12 members.

The ensemble can perform as separate entities or as a combined company of 81 musicians.

However you hear them, their unique sound and style is sure to “resonate” with you for a long time to come.

What They Do:

Most of the instruments played by the group are conventional percussion instruments, such as mallet keyboards, timpani, drums, etc.

The Resonators also utilize unconventional items like boxes, brake drums, tools and trash cans as instruments as well.

The combined effect is a performance collage of traditional sounds, captivating rhythms, and energy-charged fun!
